It also does vector editing to change the appearance of lines, shapes, and text. Adobe has recommended Photoshop Elements for casual enthusiasts. If you're looking for more power than Photoshop Elements offers, see the previous section for more on Photoshop.

Q: Do C# static properties get evaluated at compile time? i want to create the following struct in C#: `public struct Foo { public static readonly int Good = 2; public static int Bad { get; } = 2; }` This doesn't work - because its readonly, the Bad field must get its value at runtime. After some time I remembered that I can even do this: `public static int Foo.Bad = 2;` which also doesn't work - the Bad variable is still readonly. Question 1: Do static properties get evaluated at compile time as well? Question 2: Is there any other way to define my struct in a static way? A: Yes they are evaluated at compile time. Because they are compiled together they are not evaluated until you try to use them. For some cases (like this one), they still aren't evaluated at runtime either. After they are evaluated, if you assign to them, it does not actually make a difference because it is a compile time error. The method to create one "as if" it was not read only is: `private int _Bad = 2; public int Bad { get { return _Bad; } set { _Bad = value; } }` A: See Compile Time Constant Evaluation. There are compile-time constants (values that can be determined at compile-time)... Because I am pouncing from pure joy! We have an absolute crush on this amazing new video for the Far East Movement's We Love This Love Song. The song has such a cool beat with some dope synths and great vocals. I love the video too, with the simple line of dancers with an edge of sweat, it gives the track a very theatrical look.

ST. PETERSBURG -- Don't bother calling Tampa Bay Rays ace Chris Archer. He says he has already closed the "verbal book" on this season. "I feel good, but I also think I've peaked," Archer said Wednesday after doing a light workout at Tropicana Field. "I don't feel like I'm at the top of my game. "This was the best camp I've had, in a long time. I feel like my overall stuff is good, but not at the peak where I want to be at. That's the exciting part about being in camp, that you're never 100 percent." Archer would be disappointed if the Rays keep him in long relief, but manager Kevin Cash said he liked the right-hander's performance in the rotation so far. Archer went 5 1/3 innings, allowing two runs on three hits in his Cactus League debut. He struck out five and walked two. The No. 1 pick in the 2013 draft, Archer was 2-0 with a 2.00 ERA in three starts last year. The strikeouts were still there, but his walk rate rose to 8.8 per nine innings, up from 6.9 the previous season. Archer, 24, is set to start Saturday in Oakland against the Athletics' Sean Manaea, who has allowed the most home runs in baseball (39). "He's done a great job for the last few years, but he's only going to get better," Cash said. "I think he has a chance to be a really special pitcher. "It's about mindset, control and confidence. It's about being a more complete player, because you can get away with more stuff when you can get outs. He's had to learn to work within the mechanics of his delivery to keep his pitches lower and be more consistent. The stuff is really good, and it's helped his changeup and fastball a lot. Hopefully, they'll continue to get better with him." Erasmo Ramirez, who got the second job in the rotation, said Archer "is a good pitcher and has great potential. I think we'll see him as a starter in the long run." While Archer grew up in the Tampa Bay area, he said he feels no special connection to his native state. "I like Florida, and I've had a lot of fun here," he said. "But my family's from Rochester, New York
