A: With Windows 8, you will need a 64-bit operating system to be able to use Revit. If you already have an older version of Windows installed on your machine, you will need to have that updated so that you can use the new features. If you don't have an older copy of Windows, you will need to get one. Here are some options to get you started. A: For 64 bit platform you can get software from For 32 bit you can get software from Q: Is it possible to generate a native html5 webworker from python? I want to make a python script which generates a web worker that will fire a function when a user interaction happens. Is there an efficient way to do this in python? I haven't found anything online related to this. I've seen some of the stuff in here: but I cannot create a dynamic one. I also want the worker to fire a function that will print something to the console. A: Python doesn't have web workers. Python doesn't have strings either. What you really want is to create a real worker by starting a process, managing that process, and communicating with that process. For example, you could do this:

import os
import threading
import Queue
import sys
import signal

def worker(queue):
    print('I am a web worker.')
    queue.put('message sent by the web worker to your application via queue')

def listener(queue):
    queue.put('message received from web worker application')
    print('I am a web listener.')

class Worker():
    def __init__(self, target):
        self.queue = Queue.Queue()
        self.listener = listener
        self.target = target

    def run(self):
        self.queue.put('6d1f23a050')
```
